

Helping your child learn English through sharing picture books by Opal Dunn

Young children learning English as a second language can enjoy picture books in English as much as native-speaker children. Parents, even with a basic knowledge of English, can guide and encourage their children and have a positive impact upon their learning.

In the first few sharings of a new book, parents need to remember the following:

- Make sure that children are close enough to see how the parent's lips move to make sounds and how the eyes and face, as well as body language, convey the excitement and emotions that facilitate understanding.
- Read at the children's pace, letting them look at the picture for as long as they need. Young children are used to getting visual information to facilitate understanding.
- Dramatise the story reading and if possible include some physical gesture; this helps in memorising language. Use different fun voices for animal noises and characters as you read the story. Children love to imitate characterisation and transfer it to their own 'reading' aloud.
- Point to each word as you read so that children develop better left-to-right eye movement, and become conscious of the shape of words.

- Encourage joining in by letting children finish off sentences or make the noises of animals or transport.
- Once the reading is finished, close the book and stay silent for a few seconds. Children may be in their own imaginative world and need time before they are ready to leave it.
- Asking too many questions about the book can spoil the magic. Families who enjoy books together often find that children, when they are ready, talk to them about the shared English books in their home language.
- If children use a home language word or phrase while talking English, it is generally because they have not yet acquired the word in English or have forgotten it. Make no mention about the mixture of language and repeat back to them the whole phrase in English. They will notice and generally pick up the English, ready to use it at some later stage.

Parents may be concerned when children who can already read in their home language also want to decode words in picture books. Where children are learning to read English in school, parents often think any other reading might interfere with the formal teaching. Formal teaching of reading should not be confused with the experience of reading picture books for pleasure. If children show interest in teaching themselves to read, parents should encourage their enthusiasm and help them informally.

Children soon begin to recognise the shape of simple words as they already know the text by heart, and therefore know where to look for them. Being able to read a text motivates and is an important step on the journey to becoming a fluent reader. Any reading done in an enjoyable, non-pressured way at a young age, when lifelong attitudes are being formed, is likely to contribute to a later love of language and books.

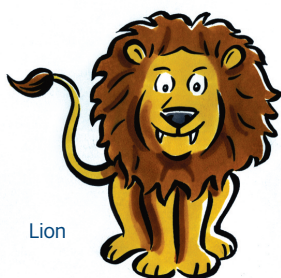

Activities to use with children

Real animals and fantasy animals

Sit down with your child and help him or her to decide which of the animals are real, and which are fantasy animals. Get your child to write the words in the correct column. If your child is not confident in writing in English, you can write the words for him or her.

Unicorn

Lion

Dragon

Bull

Eagle

Ogre

Real animals

1 _____
2 _____
3 _____

Fantasy animals

1 _____
2 _____
3 _____

Answers Real animals – eagle, lion, bull Fantasy animals – ogre, dragon, unicorn

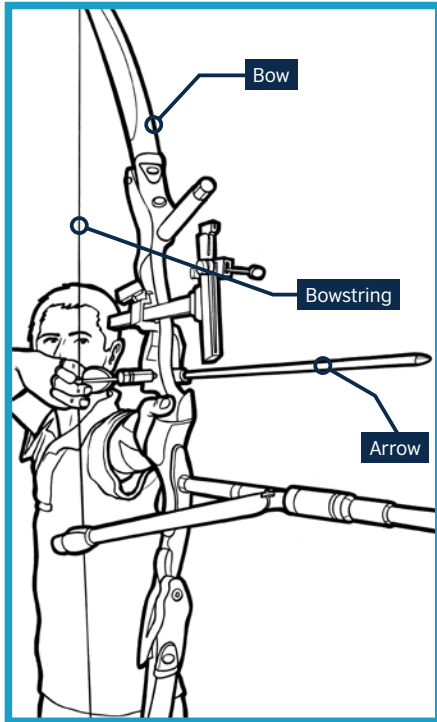

Exercise

After reading the article, decide the correct endings to the following sentences:

- 1 When sharing a new book, children's understanding is facilitated by:
 - a being able to see the parents eyes and face convey excitement and emotions.
 - b looking at the pictures in the book rather than the parents to identify emotions.
- 2 To encourage children joining in with reading, parents should:
 - a reward them with treats.
 - b let children finish off sentences.
- 3 Being able to read a text is an important step towards:
 - a becoming a fluent reader.
 - b being able to write stories.
- 4 Children talk about shared books in their home language:
 - a when they are ready to.
 - b when parents ask them lots of questions about the books.
- 5 If children want to teach themselves to read, parents should:
 - a discourage them as it may interfere with their formal English teaching at school.
 - b encourage their enthusiasm and help them informally.

Answers 1a 2b 3a 4a 5b

Archery

This article is part of a series produced by the British Council to help you learn English and learn about different Olympic and Paralympic sports.

Archery is over 10,000 years old. How did it develop from warfare to Olympic sport?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Archery? What's that?

A sport. You use a bow and shoot an arrow. You try to hit the target with the arrow.

Didn't people do that 10,000 years ago?

Yes. People had bows and arrows then in Japan, the Middle East and many other parts of the world. But it wasn't a sport. Soldiers used them in wars and hunters used them to shoot animals for food.

Then what happened?

In the 12th century people started making guns, which were much better than bows and arrows. So archery almost disappeared.

'Almost'? What do you mean 'almost'?

In the 1700s in England, medieval things became fashionable. Archery became popular again.

Is this when archery became a sport?

That's right. Archery competitions were a great social network then. Men and women used them to meet, flirt and fall in love.

So if someone wanted to get married, it was a good idea to take up archery?

Exactly. Apparently some people thought that women looked very beautiful when they were holding a bow!

How exciting! So I suppose it was a very popular Olympic sport then?

Not really. In the 1920 Olympics in Antwerp, Belgium, only three countries sent archers. And they were all men. And then there were no Olympic archery competitions for many years.

Oh dear. So did archery go out of fashion again?

Well, the real problem was that every country had its own rules about archery. Archery couldn't be an Olympic sport without international rules.

And are there international rules now?

Yes, there are. Archery became an Olympic sport again in the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany.

So who are the best archers in the world nowadays?

The South Koreans have dominated the sport for several years now. The current Olympic Men's Champion is Viktor Ruban from Ukraine. And China and Britain won several gold medals in the Paralympic archery events in the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

ACTIVITY

Choose the correct answer to each of the following questions and statements.

- What was archery originally used for?
 - Fighting
 - Hunting
 - Social networking
 - Sport
- Did archery disappear when guns were invented?
 - Yes
 - No
- According to the text, things from the Middle Ages became popular in the 1700s in England.
 - True
 - False
- Only people who practised archery got married in the 1700s in England.
 - True
 - False
- There were international rules for archery...
 - 10,000 years ago.
 - At the 1920 Olympics in Antwerp.
 - At the 1972 Olympics in Munich.
 - At the 2008 Olympics in Beijing.
 - In the 1700s in England.

RULES FOR ARCHERY

- There are individual and team competitions for both men and women.
- The target is placed at a distance of 70 metres.
- Preliminary rounds are held to select the best eight archers for the finals.
- In the finals, archers shoot four ends of three arrows each.
- Time is important too. The archer has a 40-second time limit per arrow.
- The target has ten rings, from very big on the outside to the small circle in the centre.
- Each ring on the target is worth from one to ten points. The smallest, in the middle, is worth ten points.
- The winner is the archer who scores the most points.
- The results of the preliminary rounds in the individual competition are also used to select teams for the team events.
- In the team competition, each team has three archers.
- Each team shoots three ends of nine arrows each. Each archer on the team shoots one end.
- Team members have three minutes each to finish their end.

WORDSEARCH

A	K	N	E	C	E	G	H	A	C
R	B	V	D	N	L	H	R	R	P
R	T	O	S	Z	D	L	P	C	G
O	E	A	W	R	X	C	H	H	D
W	O	T	R	S	O	T	Y	E	L
L	U	G	T	G	T	U	T	R	Y
R	U	J	N	B	E	R	N	P	P
N	I	M	Q	O	N	T	I	D	W
V	Y	N	M	W	T	I	U	N	L
Z	K	R	G	X	E	N	P	X	G

Find these words in the grid

bow bowstring arrow target archer end round ring