LA skaters: an interview

By Robin Newton

Monica and Carl are teenagers from Los Angeles in the United States. They both love skateboarding. Read this interview and find out more about their favourite sport.

Who invented skateboarding?

Carl: In California in the 1950s, skateboarding was popular with surfers. They wanted to practise surfing on land when the ocean was calm or the weather was bad.

Where can you go skateboarding?

Monica: There are skate parks in lots of towns and cities. You can practise jumps and meet other skateboarders.

When did you start?

Monica: When I was a child, I liked going roller-skating with my friends. When I was 13, a friend got a skateboard and I tried it. I fell several times but I loved it. Two weeks later, I got my first skateboard. But I still do both sports.

Carl: When I was 11, my dad gave me a skateboard for my birthday and I spent the summer at the local skate park. I love the freedom and speed.

Is skateboarding dangerous?

Carl: All skateboarders fall off their boards but most injuries are minor. It's a good idea to wear a helmet to protect your head.

Are there skateboarding competitions?

Monica: Yes, they usually take place in skate parks. Skateboarders do jumps or tricks. The skateboarders who do the most difficult ones win.

Carl: There was a campaign to get skateboarding included in the 2016 Olympic Games, but unfortunately it wasn't successful.

Monica: And there's 'Go Skateboarding Day' on 21 June every year. In the United States, Europe and Australia, there are competitions, parties and barbecues for skateboarders.

What about fashion? Is there a skater look?

Carl: At the moment, the fashion is to wear tight jeans or black trousers and a T-shirt or check shirt. Baseball caps and hats are popular too.

What's a long board?

Monica: Skateboards are usually 70–80 centimetres long, but long boards are 90–120 centimetres and have bigger wheels. It's difficult to do jumps on a long board, but you can go fast. In 2006, a skateboarder went across Australia on a long board. That's 5,850 kilometres!
