Valentine's Day

By Sally Trowbridge

Do you celebrate Valentine's Day in your country? In the UK, 14 February is the most romantic day of the year! So how do people mark the occasion?

Sending a Valentine's card to a loved one is a custom that started more than a century ago. Couples give cards to each other, but it is also traditional to send an anonymous card to someone you love. This is particularly common in schools and can be a source of great amusement and embarrassment as everyone tries to work out who has a secret admirer!

Millions of people now send digital messages such as e-cards or printable greeting cards. Texting your Valentine message is another option. Here are some common messages:

WUBMV = will you be my Valentine

xoxoxoxoxo = hugs and kisses

LUWAM<3 = love you with all my heart

:-) = I'm so happy, I'm crying

As well as cards, 14 February is also a day for giving presents. Traditionally, men buy chocolates or flowers for their wives or girlfriends. Other popular choices last year included: an mp3 player, a CD of romantic songs, a phone, jewellery, a photo frame or perfume. For romantics with plenty of cash there are more unusual gifts such as: a helicopter flight, a balloon ride, the chance to test-drive a Ferrari or an all-day session at a health club.

Valentine's Day is also a popular day to either propose or get married – you'd never forget your wedding anniversary!

We asked a few Brits about their views on Valentine's Day and here's what they said:

'I sent an anonymous Valentine's card to a boy in my class when I was younger. Then my brother told him it was from me. I was so embarrassed!'

'I got a card last year – but I still don't know who sent it. I haven't got a girlfriend.'

'My boyfriend sent me a text message last year on Valentine's Day. I suppose that's kind of romantic but I'd rather have a present or even a real card.'

'Chocolates, roses, cards, presents. Bring it on! I love Valentine's Day!'
