Individual style

By Sally Trowbridge

Have you noticed that many of the clothes on the high street look the same these days? So how do young people manage to express their individual style? We interviewed some Brits in different parts of the country.

'Young creative people in the UK have always come up with ways to express their individuality through clothes. Punks added zips and safety pins, and skaters buy chains from hardware shops to hang from their trousers. You don't need money – you need imagination,' Alexi, art student, Aldershot.

Printing your own T-shirt is the easiest and most common way to customise clothes. You don't have to actually make a T-shirt. You can buy a cheap one and add an image of your choice.

'I used to make customised, multicoloured T-shirts for my friends using fabric paints. They looked a bit messy but sort of cool. A couple of years ago, my mate Simon made one with a picture of Obama dressed as Che Guevara. He still wears it in fact. It looks great!' John, 25, Cheshire.

Everyone knows that students don't have a lot of money. That doesn't have to be a problem if you've got a bit of imagination.

'I used to make clothes sometimes when I was a student. Once I found a pair of trousers in a shop that I really liked, but I couldn't afford them. I did a little sketch in a notebook, bought some fabric in the same colour and copied the trousers using my mum's sewing machine. I loved it when people didn't believe I had made them myself,' Corrine, 31, Dundee.

Buying second-hand or 'vintage' clothes is a fashion option for many young Brits.

'I like to make or adapt my own clothes because I know that they will fit and that they'll look good. I buy stuff like jackets, trousers and dresses in second-hand shops. You can be sure you will always have something original as well as cheap.' Helen, 26, Nottingham.
